III. Other Information

1. Reasons for loss or inadequate profits:

STL ended Fiscal 2026 with a profit ₹ 56 crores from continuing operations. While this falls short of the internal target set by the company at the beginning of the year, it nevertheless, displays a remarkable turnaround compared to last year especially in the face of the reasons listed below:

- U.S. Tariff: Regulatory tariff resets imposed severe downward pressure on reported earnings. A mid-quarter reset reduced the reported EBITDA margin by approximately 300 basis points in Q2 FY26, 760 basis points in Q3 FY26 & 600 bps in Q4 FY26, thereby contracting profit margins.
- Geopolitical disruption & cost Inflation: Ongoing war-led geopolitical tensions in West Asia have introduced severe supply chain cost inflation, specifically driving up the procurement costs of helium and polymer-based jacketing compounds.
- Critical raw material constraints: Tight global availability and export controls on critical raw materials, notably germanium (heavily restricted by China) and helium, limited the Company's ability to maximize asset sweating and factory utilization.
- Copper segment de-growth: Revenue contribution from the Enterprise and Data Centre segment experienced temporary moderation in FY26 due to a cyclical decline in the copper business, which was severely squeezed by high LME copper prices.
- Labor code exception: Profitability in Q3 FY26 was directly impacted by a one-time non-operational exceptional charge of ₹15 crore stemming from the implementation of the new labor code.
- Leadership investments: Front-loaded operational expenses occurred in early FY26 due to aggressive hiring to establish global leadership teams for new high-growth segments (such as data centres and international business lines) which has led to increased revenue in the forthcoming quarters.

2. Steps taken or proposed to be taken for improvement:

STL is brilliantly positioned to capture the immense opportunities for future growth and profitability. This is displayed in the strong OB in FY26 & increasing interest from hyperscalers & telcos in our focused geographies. STL has been aggressively pursuing and implementing multiple strategies to increase revenue, customer & product mix, reduce costs and improve cash flows, and while differentiating itself on technology. Few notable measures in this regard are listed below:

- Ramping up localized U.S. Production: Ramping up manufacturing utilization at the localized South Carolina production facility to naturally bypass U.S. import tariffs and meet "Made in America" procurement mandates.
- Tariff pass-through negotiations: Engaging in targeted client negotiations during current long-term contract renewal cycles to systematically pass through a proportion of the tariff burdens onto U.S. buyers.
- Aggressive fixed and variable cost controls: Implementing stringent cost-reduction initiatives across all operational lines to stabilize costs.
- Product mix optimization strategy: Transitioning the manufacturing mix towards premium, patented high-margin innovations, such as high-count intermittent bonded ribbon (IBR) cables, the Neuralis AI-DC portfolio, G.654.E low-loss fibers, and HCF & MCF portfolio
- Solution-level bundling integration: Structurally shifting the sales approach from selling stand-alone fibre optic cables to bundling integrated cable and connectivity components together to increase customer experience and stickiness.
- Diversifying raw material channels: Actively qualifying and pursuing alternative global geographies for the sourcing of germanium and helium to reduce supply chain dependency on restricted Chinese channels.

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT

- Strategic CAPEX: Committing to a targeted capex investment layout to upgrade assets and successfully deploy high-value DC solutions.
- Trade diplomacy measures: Maintaining active engagement with trade authorities regarding the pending USA-India Bilateral Trade Agreement to realize structural tariff relief.
- Corporate development measures: Exploring fund raising options to address debt reduction & internal operational requirements.
- Organizational restructuring: Aligned the org structure to ensure clear ownership & execution priorities across sales, operations, & other key functions.
- AI integration: Actively embedding AI into key business processes from procurement and ops to market intelligence & decision making.
- Demerger of Global Services Business (GSB): Finalizing the clean legal demerger of the GSB as an independent entity, thereby also removing internal corporate financial guarantee exposures.

3. Expected increase in productivity and profits in measurable terms:

STL believes that the favorable market dynamics, combined with proactive measures deployed over the last couple of years, will unlock massive value in FY27.

We expect to see measurable improvement across the following areas:

- EBITDA Margin: Expect EBITDA margins to reach the ~20% benchmark by the end of Q4 (FY27), as total manufacturing capacity utilization reaches the 70%+ milestone.
- DC revenue contribution to scale: Enterprise and DC segment revenue is projected to rapidly scale up to represent 30% of total company revenues within the next 12-18 months.
- Reduction of finance costs: Annual interest outlays are projected to decrease by an additional 5% to 6% over time through tighter debt management and sustained operational cash generation.
- Rationalized employee costs: Total employee expenses to stabilize within a targeted annualized band of 10% to 12% of total revenues, down from the peak level of 14%.
- B/S deleveraging: Corporate debt targets a significantly compressed Net Debt-to-EBITDA ratio of less than 1.2x for FY27.
- Fixed asset sweating: Sweating out the Company's invested factory lines to push overall capacity utilization past the 70% or 80% mark, driving maximum volume expansion and capturing scale benefits.
